

Katherine Kim is a Licensed Graduate Professional Counselor (LGPC) in the state of Maryland and certified by the National Board for Certified Counselors (NCC). She has a Master of Science degree in Counseling from Loyola College in Maryland. She joined Sheep Gate Christian Counseling in August 2009. Katherine enjoys working with adolescents (12 years old and up), adults, and couples. She is also an effective group therapist and counsel people who struggle with addiction (substance or process addiction), trauma, loss and grief, anxiety/mood disorder, and low self-esteem.

Katherine is interested in the journey of discovery, healing and growth. She believes that the goal of counseling, regardless of individual's specific problems, is to discover his or her true identity as an image-bearer of God. Our true identity seems to have been lost in the world of confusion, pain and suffering. Grieving, therefore, is an essential part of living in a fallen world. This journey of grieving often baffles us, but when taken with courage, honesty, and humility, the result can be a transformed life with new identity and meaning. Katherine would like to remind herself and encourage others that all the principles necessary for healing and growth are provided in the Bible. She sees her counseling work primarily as a way to appropriate God's truth and grace as they deliver hope and generate power to change.

Katherine is a member of the American Association of Christian Counselors (AACC) and the Christian Association of Psychological Studies (CAPS).
